Au service du Portugal Thomas de Cornoça, le consulat de Venise et le réseau de renseignement portugais à Rome au milieu du xvi^e siècle

- Publication type: Article from a collective work
- Collective work:
Les Consuls en Méditerranée, agents d'information . XVI^e-XX^e siècle
- Author: Tavim (José Alberto Rodrigues da Silva)
- Abstract: Thomas de Cornoça, the Portuguese consul in Venice from 1553 to 1585, played a dynamic role as an intermediary in a multicultural chain of informers, including most notably the Nasci family, who occupied a privileged position with regard to the Sublime Porte. A key player in the transmission of news gathered in Rome or the Levant to Lisbon, was Cornoça in fact a double agent, providing the Nasci family with the necessary information for them to assure their pre-eminence in the Ottoman empire?
